Former steelworker goes from blue collar to green collar with Mohawk's help

Rick Phillips was laid off in March 2009, ending a 13-year career in the steel industry. A casualty of the recession, Rick joined the thousands of workers that were cast off by their employers during the worst economic downturn in decades. Two years later, the economy is slowly recovering and Rick has a new career working as installer for The Green Method, a local company that specializes in green energy products such as geothermal heating and cooling units, solar panels and solar hot air units.
